

Validity's
Five Client
Commitments

Your needs come first.

At Validity, C is for Client. We believe litigation finance should serve you, the client. Where other funders see legal assets, we see people and businesses. We believe you are entitled to a funder who brings integrity and a spirit of collaboration to the funding process and beyond. Your case is unique, and your funder should treat it that way. At Validity we will think about the nuances of your case and craft bespoke solutions. We are a nimble team, unconstrained by layers of bureaucracy or rigid conventions. We make these commitments to our clients. Whether you choose to work with us or with another funder, you should never settle for less.

Validity's Five Client Commitments

Confidentiality

You deserve a partner and a confidant. Confidentiality is the foundation of our legal process and ethical code. Our client relationships always start with a non-disclosure agreement that fully protects your sensitive and privileged information.

Capital

You must be able to bank on your funder's promise of capital, literally. You should never have to worry that a funder will default on its capital commitment to you. At Validity we have $250 million in assets to draw upon and we're backed by a leading private equity firm. We have the resources to fund our commitments all the way to resolution.

Control

When a home-owner gets a mortgage, the bank doesn't get to decorate the house. Likewise, a litigation funder should never try to substitute its judgment for yours. You are entitled to full control of your litigation including selecting counsel, obtaining legal advice on your funding agreement, establishing your case strategy and whether or when to settle.

Clarity

You are entitled to a clear, concise funding agreement - because life's too short for legalese. Our funding agreement is 19 pages of plain English, and it clearly articulates the amount of capital, how returns will be divided and a fair dispute resolution process.

Client-first Returns

You are not someone else's "financial asset." Litigation funding has begun to attract financiers who care more about their rate of return than about empowering you to resolve your cases. At Validity we believe the client is entitled to the majority of any damages award and we strive to ensure that you receive at least 50%.
